Investigation at

St Lawrence Church Bovingdon

19.02.2016

Although being on the wet side this was quite an enjoyable investigation. Just before we started Andy G was aware of a young lady by the name of Annabelle. She was dressed in white and constantly sobbing. She relayed a sad story of a love triangle in which her lover was killed by her husband.

We walked along a path to an area Andy G felt she is most commonly felt or even seen. She is looking for her lover (name not given) who is buried somewhere in the area. Andy G was then given a vivid picture of herself in a room talking to her love. He has his back to the door.

Suddenly the door opens and her husband rushes in and stabs the man in the back killing him instantly. The husbands name is Captain Edward Rogers. Both men have the same red tunic on as though they were in the same regiment. The year given was 1901. A little time after this she began screaming at me so I let her be on her way.

At the beginning of the investigation, Sebastian saw what had looked a shadow figure dart across from a tree to a gravestone at speed. Further analysis with the camera showed it was a branch swaying in the wind which he didn't see earlier.

Upon analysing the photos taken during the investigation, Sebastian has found what looks like a mist in the form of a boot. The gravestone where I saw this was made of granite. A closer look on the suspect object shows it couldn't be the flash bouncing off neither the gravestone nor a raindrop on the lens as it's nowhere near as bright as a flash bounce and it's far too sophisticated to be a raindrop.

The team manage to get one and a half hours break in the weather to conduct an investigation on what was a rainy and very windy night and given the very poor conditions managed to undertake the investigation.
