Church Street

14th December 2007

I want to spend sometime at the church on my own for spiritual guidance and to reflect on personal matters and to get away from the rat race and be alone. I had to ask to enter the church and was duly shown to one of the smaller chapels. I think it was St Stephens chapel but I am not sure.

This area is small and has a large wooden cross at the front and above this figures emerge from the stone. To my right there was a passageway and this led to the reception area. Also to my right there was a small doorway and as the door was open I could see into the large area of the main church. Behind me on the right were some stairs that went up into the church.

After a period spent in meditation, reflection and prayer I remembered I had my recorder on me and so set up a sound recording. Shortly after this while deep in thought I felt my left leg go very cold. And then this feeling left, I checked for draughts but as I was near a corner there were none.

While I was sat there I also observed a ball of light in the other room that was white/gold in colour with lots of thin spikes coming out of it in the other room. I saw this through the doorway. It lasted only a few seconds but I checked and there was no one else there.

I also had the feeling that someone was standing in the doorway on my right and on one occasion thought I had a glimpse of something when I was turning away but could not be sure. The recordings did not reveal any paranormal activity.

As this was not meant to be an investigation and I was there for other purposes I soon left. However this site could well be active in my opinion and I do not know what I saw but I left the church feeling very positive.
