Investigation Site	Gubblecote Grand Union Canal
Investigation Date	21.04.2017
Report By	Andrew Fazekas
Team Members	Andy f, Sheila R, Charlotte G, Michael M.

Background

The Investigation site of the Grand Union Canal has no paranormal history. There are no recorded sightings of hauntings and no one but LPS has ever investigated this location which is in the middle of nowhere.

However some years ago LPS was investigating another location nearby to this one and it was known a body of a victim passed over this location. During that Investigation LPS left one team at this location just to assess if there was any activity. Members investigating found one female spirit under the bridge who wanted to communicate and more along the canal itself.

Investigation

During this investigation the team conducted investigations at three different locks in order to compare results and under the canal bridge which was the area picked up on in the previous investigation.

On the west side of the Bridge Charlotte sensed a woman's spirit present called Victoria or Vicky. She was very cautious and wary of us being there, she seemed upset and at one stage this member who is sensitive could hear this woman sobbing.

21:30 Sheila saw the figure of a man to her right, it was a very brief encounter and she felt nothing else from him, he was approximately 5'5" tall. The only other sensation Sheila had was that there was someone behind the team when they were stationary, a male presence, that feeling came and went throughout the evening's investigation. There was no ill feeling; more like the team was being watched out of curiosity.

On the east side of bridge there was a male spirit who was in his early 40's about 41 - 42 years old, it was believed he was connected to Victoria and Charlotte sensed and felt they were married, but he had an affair and Victoria was distraught hence the sobbing.

Charlotte felt there was a lot of tension between the two of them, which may indicate why one of them is on one side of the canal bridge and the other one is on the other side. As the team investigated under the bridge itself Charlotte felt Victoria disappear.
